updates on the insane world of money and power
While They Preach Diversity—No Critique Is Allowed

Consider human nature. Workers, in a time when government is in the grasp of 'the monied interests', come together (with good intention), to form a union so as to obtain an equitable share of profits. At first successful, then, from within and without, come the 'hoodlums', preying on the assets, as spoils, for their agenda of greed and power.

The 'Jimmy Hoffa' union saga, and the parallel rise of 'Cosa Nostra' ('our thing'/Mafia), tells the story of a pernicious aspect of human nature making its way from a smallish island, Sicily, to become a major player in the economy of another continent.

At a time in the 20th century when 'rule of law' was, attires, in force, Americans, Bobby Kennedy, Estes Kefauver, and Rudy Giuliani, went after 'organized crime' and the aspect of human nature it represents, with some success, but an article today on ZeroHedge points clearly to our loss of 'rule of law'—replaced with 'rules-based' order.

Albert Gore, who nearly became president of the United States—decrees: people having access to information outside of mainstream media sources is a threat to 'democracy' with a result that social media algorithms ought to be banned. Attacking 'free speech' he depicts social networks in terms of algorithms (interesting take on his name), that he then labels the 'digital equivalent' of AR-15s. More platforms to ban.

This confluence of Gore-isms is a serious development, but first, let's amuse ourselves with it. You might remember his wife Tipper, as the force behind banning explicit lyrics from groups such as 'Green Day', who's transgression was not wanting to be an American—given the degree of inhumanity the US was inflicting on the world.

Albert supported his wife's censorship that has now burgeoned into his platform for inflicting total control on the Western world (and rest of the world—if that be possible).

Lest we forget, Gore offered-up 'planks to his platform' at a global climate conference—one he no doubt attended in a private jet—using more CO<sub>2</sub> than we imagine.

Consider the tactics that go into his strategy: he likened 'free speech' (at a time when the 2nd Amendment is under attack from all sides), as a 'AR-15'. And, he made his remarks in terms of 'climate change'—an imperative for the health of global citizenry.

The tactics are one thing and the strategy is another. The tactics are there to further the strategy, which is the imposition of a 'feudal hell' on those who are not members of the elite. The tactics work to support the strategy, but both tactics and strategy are secondary considerations when compared to what this is—and from where it comes.

Reflect on the sanity of Gore/Kerry and their ilk. People like Gore see themselves as chosen ones (but by whom—they certainly don't believe in God), tasked with re-making the world. As if they were God, they re-shape humanity in their own image—but their image is what is generally understood to be the exact opposite of anything 'divine'.

The sane among us need come to terms with a fact: elites have lost what it means to be human, no longer want to be human, and have become incapable of human ethos.

They are instead a more powerful 'mafia', in which 'our thing' is 'their thing'. The Bill of Rights is the enemy because they reject the 'rule of law' as inconsequential for elite tyrants who see anything outside of 'rules-based order' as the 'enemy of democracy'.

The irony being: 'democracy' is hateful anathema for elites, 2nd worst to a 'body politic' wearing the garments of a 'republic'. In Gore's world, nobody gets the 'vote'. Except maybe for one last election where the herd is called-upon to vote away its rights.

Evil has now shifted into overdrive, without bounds. Elites no longer need explain except through pronouncements. John Kerry (climate czar), testifying in Congress was informed that CO2 levels were much higher before humans. He attributed that to geology. Is there no geology now—no earthquakes/volcanoes? When questioned about his 2009 declaration when he assured that within 5 years the Arctic-melt would create an ice-free Arctic sea lane, he retorted to the questioner—'Not a serious conversation.'

That's because' the lords of science are beyond critique. We are now in an arena, so pernicious, that acknowledging merits of discussion/free speech, is no longer required.

Kerry reminds us: another 1/2 degree rise in temperature caused by food production emissions 'will' plunge another 600 million of 'our fellow citizens' into hunger. We must stop production emissions. 'We can't continue to warm the planet and expect to feed it'.

Where do elites take us from here? When cutting-off gas vehicles in favor of EV fails, do as we are doing in Ukraine, place the blame on those who bought-into our ideology.

The extinction of gasoline as well as EV, once completed, will be not be a failure because the cessation of both was the goal all along. Once 'climate czars' have eviscerated 'gas power', they can then focus on coal—the only plentiful energy source left.

To maintain 'our health', abundantly inexpensive coal has to go. Cutting-off energy sources that both keep us alive and preview our death brings focus to elite motive: coupled with migrant insanity at the Southern border, the goal is to destroy the West.

Cow farts don't starve millions but the lockdowns did. Still they link their entire agenda to 'health'—its all being done for our health. And their one hope is that we are deluded enough to believe them. Believe them when it's obvious that they are the cause.

The battle lines are drawn and seen in lawsuits brought against the 2nd Amendment. While 27 states have instituted open-carry laws, blue states are tightening restrictions. Most are absurd and rejected by courts with a result that any and all attacks on the right 'to keep and bear' come from a dark, sick place—a place populated by the insane.

Even when the state asks that 'applicants' (there are no applicants in the 2nd Amendment), be of a good moral character, we need be vigilant—every inch they gain is intended to become a mile. The 2nd Amendment is clear, and 2 Supreme Court decisions support the actual intent of the 2nd Amendment. Actions to subvert are treason.

Because the elite see no longer see the need to explain or justify, it is incumbent on us to recognize that we are dealing with criminal insanity—and to treat them as such. Understanding how sick they are, we need to look deeper than their tactics/strategies.
