

There Is The American Pravda. Will There be A Malaysian Pravda?

By Matthias Chang – Future Fast-Forward

Warning To Arsehole Malaysians

Read and understand before jumping to conclusions. The American Pravda is the name of a brilliant website hosted by a Jew, Ron Unz. I am a frequent visitor to the website that carries a wide spectrum of writers, journalists from the “right” to the “Left” and enabled me to have a better world view!

Maybe it is time for a Malaysian Pravda since we are so brainwashed.

Malaysians will scream and members of the National Security Apparatus may well take action and also scream that there are “Communists” in our midst, by virtue of the word “Pravda”.

Why?

Pravda is the official organ of the Communist Party of the USSR, and is not to be confused with "Izvestia," the organ of the Soviet Government. "Pravda" means "truth," and "Izvestia" means "news." Pravda was started in 1912, with the encouragement of Stalin & Lenin, its first edition running to 60,000 copies.

One freaking word “Pravda” and the idiots will go on a counter-propaganda rampage. Welcome to the world of spoon-fed and brainwashed Malaysians.

But, Malaysians accepted “The New Economic Policy” (NEP) - 3 Alphabets!

Read and have nightmare, numbskulls!

The New Economic Policy (NEP), introduced by Lenin at the Tenth Party Congress in March 1921, represented a major departure from the party's previous approach to running the country.

The New Economic Policy (NEP) (Malay: Dasar Ekonomi Baru (DEB)) was a social re-engineering and affirmative action program formulated by the National Operations Council (NOC) in the aftermath of 13 May Incident in Malaysia.

This is the reason why I call Malaysians, “Numbskulls”, spoon-fed and brainwashed to think one way and one way only.

- By that stupid reasoning each and every Prime Minister must be a communist and detained under ISA or SOSMA (as I was detained, arrested and persecuted but, I fought back and was acquitted in a Court of Law)?

- Each and every government official that implemented the NEP must be a communist and detained?
- Are all Bumiputeras Communists and be locked up, having benefited from NEP?

I will refer to another country which uses NEP:

After the collapse of the Chandra Shekhar government in the midst of the crisis and the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi led to the election of a new Congress government led by P. V. Narasimha Rao, who selected Amar Nath Verma to be his Principal Secretary and Manmohan Singh to be finance minister and gave them complete support in doing whatever they thought was necessary to solve the crisis. Verma helped draft the New Industrial Policy alongside Chief Economic Advisor Rakesh Mohan, and it laid out a plan to foster Indian industry in five points. Manmohan Singh is considered to be the father of New Economic Policy (NEP) of India. Manmohan Singh introduced the NEP on July 24, 1991.

Need I say more? I offer no apologies for plain writing and speaking!

Confessions of A War Criminal – Robert McNamara

Tim Weir of the New York Times wrote an article in 2009 entitled, “Robert S. McNamara, Architect of a Futile War, Dies at 93” and exposed the war criminal.

In 1995, 14 years after leaving public life, McNamara published his denunciation of the Vietnam War and his role in it, “In Retrospect: The Tragedy and Lessons of Vietnam” (Times Books/Random House).

Unlike any other Secretary of Defence, McNamara struggled in public with the morality of war and the uses of American power.

I will quote in extenso so that numbskulls will be drilled down to the core truths.

‘We are the strongest nation in the world today,’ Mr. McNamara said in ‘The Fog of War’ released at the time of the 2003 invasion of Iraq. ‘I do not believe that we should ever apply that economic, political, and military power unilaterally. If we had followed that rule in Vietnam, we wouldn’t have been there. None of our allies supported us. Not Japan, not Germany, not Britain or France. If we can’t persuade nations with comparable values of the merit of our cause, we’d better re-examine our reasoning. War is so complex it’s beyond the ability of the human mind to comprehend,’ he concluded.

‘Our judgement, our understanding, are not adequate. And we kill people unnecessarily.’

Tim Weiner wrote:

Half a million American soldiers went to war on his watch. More than 16,000 died; 42,000 more would fall in the seven years to come. The war became his personal nightmare. Nothing he did, none of the tools at his command — the power of American weapons, the forces of technology and logic, or the strength of American soldiers — could stop the armies of North Vietnam and their South Vietnamese allies, the Vietcong. He concluded well before leaving the Pentagon that the war was futile, but he did not share that insight with the public until late in life.

In 1995, he took a stand against his own conduct of the war, confessing in a memoir that it was “wrong, terribly wrong.” In return, he faced a firestorm of scorn.

Mr. McNamara must not escape the lasting moral condemnation of his countrymen. The New York Times said in a widely discussed editorial, written by the page’s editor at the time, Howell Raines. ‘Surely he must in every quiet and prosperous moment hear the ceaseless whispers of those poor boys in the infantry, dying in the tall grass, platoon by platoon, for no purpose. What he took from them cannot be repaid by prime-time apology and stale tears, three decades late’.

By then he wore the expression of a haunted man. He could be seen in the streets of Washington — stooped, his shirttail flapping in the wind — walking to and from his office a few blocks from the White House, wearing frayed running shoes and a thousand-yard stare.

In the film, Mr. McNamara described the American firebombing of Japan’s cities in World War II. He had played a supporting role in those attacks, running statistical analysis for Gen. Curtis E. LeMay of the Army’s Air Forces. ‘We burned to death 100,000 Japanese civilians in Tokyo — men, women and children,’ Mr. McNamara recalled; some 900,000 Japanese civilians died in all. LeMay said, ‘If we’d lost the war, we’d all have been prosecuted as war criminals.’ And I think he’s right. ‘He — and I’d say I — were behaving as war criminals. What makes it immoral if you lose and not immoral if you win? he asked. He found the question impossible to answer.

On nuclear war, Tim Weiner wrote:

At the height of the missile crisis, on Oct. 27, 1962, the Joint Chiefs of Staff recommended that Cuba be invaded within 36 hours. As the secret White House taping system installed by Kennedy recorded his words, Mr. McNamara laid out the prospects for war. ‘The military plan is basically invasion,’ he said. ‘When we attack Cuba, we are going to have to attack with an all-out attack.’ He continued, ‘The Soviet Union may, and, I think, probably will, attack the Turkish missiles.’ The United States would then have to attack Soviet ships or bases in the Black Sea, he said. The chances of an uncontrolled escalation were high. ‘And I would say that it is damn dangerous,’ he said. ‘Now, I’m not sure we can avoid anything like that if we attack Cuba. But I think we should make every effort to avoid it. And one way to avoid it is to defuse the Turkish missiles before we attack Cuba.’

That idea — a secret deal in which Kennedy offered to withdraw his missiles in Turkey if Khrushchev removed his warheads from Cuba — resolved the crisis. ‘In the end, we lucked out — it was luck that prevented nuclear war,’ Mr. McNamara said in ‘The Fog of War,’ 40 years after the fact.

Mr. McNamara spent countless hours as secretary of defense trying to fine-tune American plans for nuclear war, turning what had been a hair-trigger, all-or-nothing strategy into a series of more limited options. The underlying principle of nuclear deterrence became known as ‘mutual assured destruction’ — meaning that Washington and Moscow each knew it could destroy the other even if the other struck first. In retirement, Mr. McNamara argued that planning for nuclear war was futile. ‘Nuclear weapons serve no military purposes whatsoever,’ he wrote. ‘They are totally useless — except only to deter one’s opponent from using them.’ He had come close to that conclusion after the Cuban missile crisis. ‘In wars prior to the advent of nuclear weapons, damage was repairable and victory attainable,’ Mr. McNamara said on Dec. 14, 1962, in a speech to NATO foreign ministers in Paris. ‘But after a full nuclear exchange such as the Soviet bloc and the NATO alliance are now able to carry out, the fatalities might well exceed 150 million. The devastation would be complete and victory a meaningless term,’ he said.

Today, Biden and NATO are throwing caution to the wind and provoking Russia and China to a nuclear war. I had warned Malaysians often enough, but the jackass politicians and Malaysians are too pre-occupied with non-issues such as the WHO “treaty” nonsense. There will be no WHO when a nuclear war starts.

The world is led by serial war criminals in the Pentagon, the CIA, MI6, NATO and Israel. Nothing has changed since the death of McNamara and we refuse to learn from the mistakes of the past.

Parting Words

Once again, I will quote from the past but belated wisdom:

‘This place is a jungle, a jungle,’ Mr. McNamara said after a few weeks at his desk at the Pentagon. He sent teams of bright young civilians — the whiz kids, as they were known — out across the Pentagon to tame it.

They set out to make sense of a cacophony of war strategies, weapons systems and budgets among the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. The office of the secretary of defense had been established in 1947 for precisely that purpose, but the task had defeated everyone who held the job before Mr. McNamara. He applied the tools of systems analysis and succeeded in clearing some swaths through the jungle. But he alienated key members of Congress and military commanders in battles over choosing weapons and closing bases.

The Corridors of Power is a ‘jungle’ and you want to leave the fate of the world to a bunch of arseholes in a jungle?

The neo-cons are now echoing the discredited words of President Lyndon Johnson who in a speech to Americans to justify the Vietnam War said,

‘I would not allow Communist conspirators to establish another communist government in the Western Hemisphere...’

When all else fails, use the “Communist Boogie” to whip up war hysteria. The ‘Domino Theory’ was discredited and proved wrong, horribly wrong!

McNamara said so and you f#@ked up arsehole Malaysians insist that the West is right?

They may even repeat the boogie “Islamofascism” to launch a war in this part of the world as they have done after 9/11!

Muslims beware!
