updates on the insane world of money and power

The Left Best Tread Lightly These Next 2 Months

My neighbors are devastated—plodding along as aimless zombies—unable to comprehend what just happened. Stupefied MSN/CNN hosts got nothin on my townsfolk.

Election night was the 1st time I watched network news since the 2020 non-election. The hosts had aged—and if anything—gotten dumber. Anderson Copper and Van Jones did not look authentic, masquerading as humans. Worst of all was Juan Williams, FOX contributor—for whom 4 years were not kind. There he was, prattling, dumbfounded as to how the electorate could refuse a woman of color, a woman who didn't have enough time to campaign. Had Kamala had more time she could've won.

How far out of touch can Juan be? Each day Kamala was a candidate she lost support. Had she had another month to campaign, Trump would have won in a wipe-out. Kamala's shtick got so bad I would have preferred Hillary with the nuclear codes than her. Hillary, on my list of 10 top evil SOBs, isn't close to being the moron Kamala is.

I'm perplexed when I hear Judge Napolitano and his cadre announce they did not vote for Trump. This was a stark choice between tyranny of the left, and Trump whose, 4 years as president displayed a huge ego—but not much to qualify him as a tyrant.

I don't think Trump, in 2016, knew what he was doing. He admits to making bad appointments—and it's likely that without John Bolton, General Soleimani would be alive.

Though not a Trump fan, I thank the gods for his win—and for the new team of advisors he has around him. And, I need to remember to give President Trump some slack, to see what he has learned. When I hear he is choosing between Cotton/Rubio/ Pompeo, I have to side more with Thomas Massie, who on hearing about blacks being attacked online, surmised it was done by the FBI—and they should start packing bags. I voted for Trump because it was an existential choice—let's wait/see what he does.

Possibly, he will populate his administration with persons I feel safe with. Possibly, he knows that a Secretary of State is one who negotiates diplomatically with other nation—rather than threaten them. Hopefully (after watching the Miley/Austin farce), he realizes that the Pentagon functions to limit/advise presidents against adventurism.

President Trump's stand on Israel/Iran is frightening. Netanyahu functions from a reptilian brain, who counted on Biden (and now Trump), to support his horror show. In fact, polls in Israel favored Trump (80%), over Kamala (20%). That's unfortunate, given that Bobby Jr. and other that have Trump's ear are unquestioning Netanyahu minions.

Where do we look in the annals of time to find the origins of the reptilian brain? Begin with the closing of the Odyssey: Odysseus (quite a piece of work himself), returns to Ithaca where suitors, assuming he is long dead, seek the hand of beautiful Penelope. Disguised as a beggar, he makes his entry, slaying them all—guilty and innocent.

I worry that Trump's ego could push him into hubris. He was ready to take over Venezuela for the oil. He rationalized and took Syria's oil. Trump takes credit for stopping NordStream, while abandoning (Pompeo's advice), nuclear treaties that kept us safe.

Now he's going to end the Ukraine war in 1 day? This was a guy who sanctioned the hell out of Russia and left office with a 12% approval rating among Russian citizens. That said, I'm hopeful Trump can appoint advisors for a peaceful world. We shall see.

Up and down my block, otherwise decent people are shell-shocked that evil Trump has been re-elected. They don't understand that Trump has been elected 3 times. Drowning in misinformation they suffer, inconsolably, having bought way deep into true believer status. And then, over the course of 1 night—woke religion utterly failed them.

They divide into 2 groups—evil and stupid. I don't care to make the stupid suffer unnecessarily, so I try to communicate. As in: you don't win as a party that refers to the opposition (that got 5+ million more votes than your party), as terrorist/Nazi/garbage.

They don't see it. For them it's the end of democracy—the last election. Tyranny has taken over. I remind them that Trump was already president and there was no tyranny or end of elections. They maintain there were advisors who were holding him back. I remind them he had neocons advising—unlike new advisors who support Bill of Rights. Backed into a facts-corner, flummoxed—speechless—they cleave onto their illusions.

On the other hand, I remind them that Biden promised to, and got rid of NordStream. And I ask them: how would our founders view blowing up a pipeline connecting 2 countries, 1 with energy to sell, and the other, a fine-tool producing nation that needed the energy? Outside of lowbrow hubris, how does this concern the US? My neighbors accede to the comparison, but crippled by Trump (Hitler), they talk of moving to Canada.

These next 2 months could be the most dangerous in American History. Kamala spoke to peaceful transition of power—but so did Obama back in 2016 (how'd that go?). After the debacle, and some soul-searching, the scheming elites will be back at it.

This time, Trump has an actual mandate, and a team that took risks to cross-over the divide. Elites sent a message to Kennedys—what happens if you don't stay in your lane? Musk they loath—billionaires should realize which side of the bread is buttered.

Trump needs to remind elites—they committed crimes against the State/American citizens, and whether they are to be formally charged for those crimes depends on their actions between now and Inauguration Day. Any purposeful disruption to stall Trump's ability to govern needs met with full force of the law. They best tread lightly. These evil bastards tried to kill him/they ain't done yet. Forgiving neocons is over with.

Get rid of the Trump/Hitler perception? Trump needs to explain his actions in terms of the Constitution/Bill of Rights. Make the Constitution (our heritage), come alive such that Americans frequently hear explanations of why/how our founding documents work, and the purpose of each of 10 Amendments. Any migrants, unwilling to pledge support/understanding for/of the Bill of Rights, get moved to the top of the list of deportees.

Government employees, those with power: courts, policing, military, DOJ, found to be abusing positions to subvert rights, suffer immediate termination/criminal action.
